Assam is a land full of sports loving people and has produced some of the best sportsmen in the country. A rich culture of sports have existed among its inhabitants since ages. The state has been a witness to major sporting activities which includes, amongst others, the XII South Asian Games, which took place from 5 -16th February, 2016 in Guwahati as well as in Shillong.

EARLY HISTORY

RANG GHAR

(The Oldest Amphitheatre of Asia)

Built By - Ahom King Swargadeo Pramatta Singha in 1746 AD

The traditional games of Assam have been famous since the time of the Ahom rule. The great Ahom King Swargadeo Pramatta Singha built the first Amphitheater in Assam in AD 1746 which is known as Rang Ghar. The Ahom kings encouraged games like Wrestling, Sword fighting, Horse riding, Buffalo fight etc. Amongst the common people, they also organized competition in those games and enjoyed the same from the pavilion of Rang Ghar. It may be

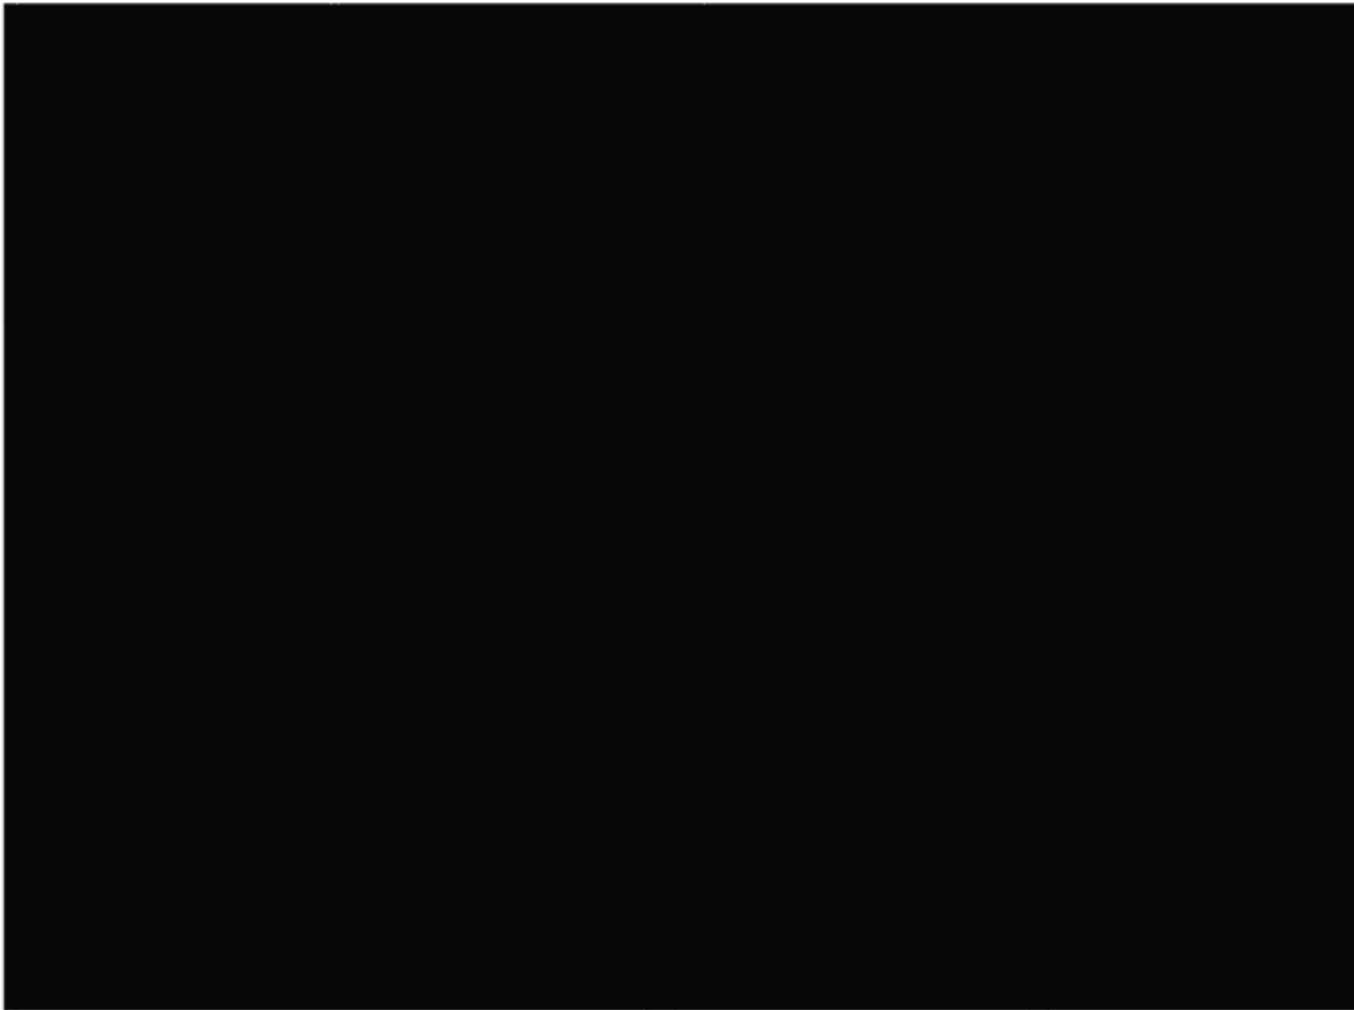

CONTEMPORARY TIMES

During contemporary times, many sportspersons have been able to bring laurels to the state and held its name high not just at the national but also at the international arena.

Of late we have seen that many boxers from Assam have been showing their talents in the National and International Sports Competitions. The live example is non other than Shiva Thapa who is going to represent India in Rio Olympics, 2016.

On the other hand Football is the most popular sport in the State. It is played in each and every village and town. A number of footballers (both male and female) of the state have represented the Indian
